1.7. Mission Statement of the Institute as presented in the Foundation Charter

The Institute of State and Law of the SAS carries on with its scientific activity in all main research directions set up by the Foundation Charter, i.e. theory of state and law and legal philosophy, public law and civil law.

Results of its research activities are applied in the legislative process as well.

The Institute carried on in the assessed period various expertise and consulting activities in various form, extend and related to broad scale of national as well as international legal questions. Institute's researchers have been involved in the works precedent to adoption of legal norms, where the aim of new legal regulation has been regulation of negative social impacts (e.g. family violence, violence on women, gender non-equality), new ordering of legal relationships in certain area of social relations (e.g. within sport or institutional basement of state sector of research and development) or adopting of new codes, which will complexly regulate legal relations (e.g. Civil procedural code). The Institute has also formulated expert opinions on broad area of legal questions, such as basic questions of the Slovak constitutional legal order (e.g. status of the Slovak National Council and President of the Slovak Republic in the parliamentary form of government) and law-governed state (e.g. problematics of indirect amendments of the Constitution of the Slovak Republic). The Institute has focused also to other important questions related to constitutional legal questions arisen from actual political development (e.g. in relation to problems of incompatibility of functions or to problems of status and competences of each individual constitutional organ after the loss of confidence of government). The Institute has prepared also expert opinions as a reflection on legal insecurity resulting out of new legal regulation (e.g. in questions of status of Office of regulation of electronic communications and post services) or expert opinions reflecting concrete questions of legal application (e.g. sale or transfer of intellectual property rights by each individual Institute of the SAS).

The Institute carries on scientific education and its researchers collaborate as directors of studies (trainers, supervisors), opponents and members of commissions for defence of dissertation theses held at universities in the SR and CR.

The Institute maintains publication of results of its research activities through periodical and non-periodical publications. Issuing of these publications is being regulated by the regulations of the Presidium of the SAS. The Institute releases theoretical journal devoted to the issues of state and law as well. The journal is called Legal Viewpoint (Právny obzor) and in the Slovak legal environment it has a longstanding tradition. It is the oldest legal scientific journal which has been continuously released since 1917 in the Slovak language.

1.8. Summary of R&D activity pursued by the institute during the assessment period in both national and international contexts, (recommended 5 pages, max. 10 pages)

In the evaluated period from the 1st of January 2012 to the 31st of December 2015 Institute of State and Law of SAS carried on with its scientific activity in all main research directions set up by the Foundation Charter, i.e. theory of state and law and legal philosophy, public law and civil law. This was done in continuity with the outcomes of research conducted in the previously evaluated 4-years period from the 1st of January 2006 to the 31st of December 2011. The scientific capacity during the actually evaluated period was distributed to cover scientific tasks resulting from the research projects supported by grants APVV, VEGA and within the framework of contracts on international academic collaboration.

The most significant part of research was realised within the framework of institutionalized projects which were scheduled in the following ways: all-institutional project of the Institute supported by APVV for the period from the 1st of May 2011 to the 31st October 2014; seven particular projects of the Institute supported by VEGA; from these VEGA projects three were scheduled for the period from the 1st of January 2010 to the 31st of December 2012, two of them were scheduled for the period from the 1st of January 2014 to the 31st of December 2016 and one project was scheduled for the period from the 1st of January 2015 to the 31st of December 2016 and one VEGA project for the period from the 1st of January 2015 to the 31st of December 2017. A part of the research was realized on the basis of the interacademic contracts in collaboration with the Academy of Sciences of the Czech Republic – the Institute of state and law AS CR, with the Polish Academy of Sciences – the Institute of legal sciences of the Polish Academy of Sciences and with the Institute for recent history AS CR and with Law Faculty of the Carl's University in Prague.

Details on these projects and their results are documented in the annually published reports on the activity of the organisation and in a concise form they can be found also in particular paragraphs of this accreditation survey. From them it is evident the significance of the realised research from the national and international point of view as well as from the viewpoint of the involvement of the Institute in the European research area. Scientific results of its employees were widely presented on scientific events where subjects or coordinators of research were other organisations.

Institute of State and Law of SAS, in its difficult financial situation which affects the support of scientific activity from public funds in the SR in the long run of time, prepared in the year 2015 projects of basic research for the period 2016 – 2020, applied for two grants APVV for the respective period and these applications were approved. With respect to the future scientific tendency of the Institute and with respect to the vision of its scientific capacity, the key role will be played by two new significant grant projects APVV. These projects represent vision of further scientific orientation of the Institute until the year 2020 and the Institute will start to solve them since July 2016. They are focused on the topics “Legal pluralism: changes in understanding of law” and “Long-lasting and recent tendencies of development of positive law in selected branches of legal order”.

However, as it was indicated in reports on the Institute's activity for previous years, in comparison with scientific centres with similar focus (also in the closest environment of other Central European states) the Institute's staff is undersized on a long term basis. From the mentioned scientific and lecturing activity of the Institute's workers it is evident that in the evaluated period 2012 – 2015 there was a wide range of legal problems which was investigated and whose solutions were presented mainly at international scientific events of various thematic orientations. With respect to the quality of the scientific activity and innovative topics which the Institute's researchers bring into the field of legal science, it is necessary to emphasize that the Institute has been oriented towards bringing new issues into the area of science since the eighties of the previous century. As first ones we started to elaborate concepts such as law-governed state, legal pluralism or postmodernism in law. The outputs of the Institute's researchers have been followed by other authors. Despite the low number of researchers the Institute achieves stable results and it is evident that the Institute enters into the multidisciplinary cooperation with other social-science disciplines, predominantly with the philosophy and sociology. Several scientific outputs are offered to direct practical utilisation. The quality of the Institute's scientific outputs is indicated also by high average number of quotations per one researcher (see 2.2.). In the evaluated period the Institute's workers were intensively engaged as evaluators of the national projects APVV and VEGA.

Continuity in the main orientation of the Institute's scientific activity in the evaluated period was visible predominantly in the fact that the Institute kept solving the research project from the previous period APVV-0340-10 Law in the dynamics of social development and its theoretical reflection which was scheduled for the period from the 1st of May 2011 till the 31st of October 2014 (Principal investigators J. Švidroň, J. Vozár). This research project as well as other VEGA research projects represents other stage of continuity in the basic scientific research of the Institute which in the year 2013 commemorated the 60th anniversary of its establishment as one of the first scientific institutes founded in the framework of the Slovak Academy of Sciences.

In the previous evaluated periods there were created solid grounds upon which the further development of the Institute's scientific activity can be established in all main directions of basic research. The main scientific aims of the Institute are put in more detail in four research grant projects VEGA with the period of investigation to the 31st December 2016 or the 31st December 2017. During the evaluated period 2012 – 2015 there was successfully realised and finished the grant project APVV-0340-10 "Law in the dynamics of social development and its theoretical reflections" with the period of investigation until the 31st October 2014 and three other research grant projects VEGA with the period of investigation until the 31st of December 2012.

The research topic of the abovementioned project APVV included multidisciplinary legal relations. It was divided into two parts from which the first was focused on the questions of positive law (public and private law, European and international law) and the second was focused on questions of legal theory (including research in the field of legal philosophy and legal history). The research in the first part took a form of reflection of the latest European and international harmonisation projects in the field of civil and business law in the Slovak legal order with the emphasize on the selected issues of contractual law, economic competition, intellectual property law, protection of personality, social security and perfection of state administration as well as international aspects of globalisation. The starting research orientation in this scope of topics were provided by various significant international and European harmonisation projects (mainly Principles UNIDROIT, PECL, CFR and the accompanying results of the latest European and globally-focused international research). In this part of the research the Institute explored primarily new trends in development of obligation law, protection of competition by antitrust law (mainly civil law aspects of the competition law which were not subject of systematic scientific attention), selected interdisciplinary aspects of protection against unfair competition (deceptive advertisement, comparative advertisement, advertisement of tobacco and medicines). Particular area of research consisted of protection of personal rights (right to privacy, protection of reputation and dignity). In relation to the protection of persons the issue of equality and discrimination was also investigated. Interdisciplinary orientation of the first section of the project included also constitutional aspects of public administration as a starting point of investigation of own issues of public administration, especially forms of its execution. In the wide expert community there had been proposal to adopt a criminal liability of corporations and since the Institute had research capacity to deal with this problem, it was included into the project (the coverage of these topics were provided by O. Ovečková, J. Švidroň, J. Vozár, J. Azud, Ľ. Gajdošíková, D. Nikodým, P. Kukliš, L. Kurilovská, Z. Magurová, L. Lapšanský, V. Janáč, B. Králičková, J. Ďurechová, M. Kropaj). The central orientation of the research in its second part was the change and fragmentation of law and their theoretical reflections. These are key words of current and especially postmodern legal thinking. At least implicitly some trends are based on them, notably postmodern legal thinking and conception of law as autopoietic system. In the international context these issues can be situated into the historical social and systematic level with theoretical connection to the Hart's rule of change as perhaps the most adequate attempt to grasp the change of law. The change of law is usually related with the development of interests and values which are predominant in a given society. External factors are relevant for the change of law valid at a certain state territory. In the case of the Slovak Republic as a new member state of the EU it was about determination of the content of valid law which was not always visible from the first sight. Moreover, the EU law itself permanently develops. For understanding of the phenomenon of the change of law the historical analysis of legal changes is crucial. In this respect the breaking political moments of the legal history of Czechoslovakia and Slovakia in the 20th century are particularly illustrative. The special type of change of law is represented by the development in the Central European and Eastern European states during last decades (research in this section was conducted by E. Bárány, P. Colotka, A. Tokár, K. Zavacká, L. Berdisová). Other significant title on an extremely current topic which in the evaluated period enriched the Slovak lawyer literature in the field of business law was a monograph Ovečková, O.: Limitation in commercial law. Kristián Csach, Andrea Moravčíková (review). 1st edition, Bratislava : Wolters Kluwer, 2015. 303 p. ISBN 978-80-8168-205-6.

The issues of law-governed state and the Europeisation of law were also solved in joint research projects prepared and realised in Institute's collaboration with the Institute of state and law AS CR with the title "Impact of the EU law on legal orders of the Czech Republic and the Slovak Republic – Law – creation, interpretation and application” (principal investigator for the Institute was O. Ovečková). The other project was realised in the Institute’s collaboration with the Institute of legal sciences of the Polish Academy of Sciences. The project was called “The influence of the Lisbon Treaty on the legal system in the Slovak Republic and the Polish Republic” (principal investigator for the Institute was P. Colotka). Within the framework of these projects the participating institutes were comparing outputs of the research achieved in the respective three member states of the EU after their joint admission into the EU or after the adoption of the Lisbon treaty.

The research within the framework of the VEGA projects realised (or finished) during the evaluated period was focused on wide range of legal issues. In the VEGA project focused on law and its environment the research started by application of the classic system theory which resulted into a conclusion and at the same time a starting point for a next research in this project, namely that the immediate environment of law understood as a normative system of certain qualities is always a human (principal investigator E. Bárány). Far reaching and wide spectral legal and extra-legal relations into which the research led in its first two years of realisation were shown mainly at the international scientific conference organized by the Institute (Tatranská Štrba, 6th – 8th of April 2011; scientific guarantees E. Bárány and P. Colotka) and in the book “Law and its environment” (Bratislava: UŠaP SAV in the Slovak Academy Press, 2011). 40 authors participated in this event and the consequent scientific output. The research continued also in the year 2012 in which it was successfully completed.

In the VEGA project focused on New in legal thought – A response of legal thought on novelties in society, other scientific fields and nature (principal investigator E. Bárány) was successfully oriented on questions such as delimitation of place where the law is, questions related to legal system and its environment or novelties in law. During the realisation of the project there was organized a conference on the 11th – 13th of March 2015 in Piešťany with the title “How law responds to novelties”. The collective volume was released from this conference (How law responds to novelties: collective volume from the conference “How law responds to novelties” organised by Institute of State and Law of SAS, 11th – 13th March 2015 in Piešťany. Bárány, E. (ed.); Cibulka, Ľ, Kukliš, P. (reviewers), Lengyelová, D. (executive editor), 1st edition, Bratislava: Institute of State and Law of SAS in the VEDA publishing house, 2015, 391 p., ISBN 978-80-224-1469-2).

A research of selected issues of the Slovak legal history was realised under the VEGA project “Preparation, formulation and following changes of the Constitution of SR 1939 – 1945 as a source of research of the contemporary legal science and legal culture” (principal investigator K. Zavacká). Subjects of this research were mainly some historical parallels accompanying dissolution of a democratic political system and legal order as well as comparison of selected historical periods with particular regard to the contrast between democratic and totalitarian environments. The results of this research lead to a warning against elimination of political opposition and against a danger of formation of totalitarian tendencies and practices which can in its final result eliminate democratic legal order.

In a democratic society the freedom of expression, secured in the hierarchy of legal norms at the highest level, belongs to its fundamental attributes. Without this freedom many frauds and scandals would remain concealed. However the restriction of the freedom of expression in direct or indirect forms can result also from a pressure of democratically elected governments. Also from these perspectives and reasons the research in other VEGA project was focused on Freedom of expression, freedom of the press and protection of personality (principal investigator L. Lapšanský). The Institute commemorated the significant anniversary of our history, namely the 25th anniversary of the Velvet revolution and the restoration of the freedom of expression on the territory of Slovakia, by organizing an international conference “Freedom of expression in decisions of courts” in 2014. The international conference was organized under auspices of the President of the Republic His Eminence Andrej Kiska. Freedom of expression is one of the basic pillar on which a democratic society stands. The 25th anniversary of fall of the totalitarian regime was a suitable opportunity for comparison of development of this right with neighbouring countries as well as with well-established democracies. Leading Slovak and foreign experts took part in this event. They analysed case law in this field and explored aspects of freedom of expression from several legal branches.

The outcome of this conference is a collective monograph “Freedom of expression in decisions of courts” in which authors deal with philosophical, historical but mainly legal aspects of freedom of expression. (VOZÁR, J. et al. Freedom of expression in Decisions of Courts. Bratislava : Institute of State and Law of SAS, 2015, 212 p. ISBN: 978-80-224-1470-8). In the form of analysis of the most relevant judicial decisions they focus on the development of judicial case law not only in post socialist countries such as Hungary, Slovakia, the Czech Republic, but also in well-established democracies such as USA, Germany and France. Particularly, they pay their attention to the case law of the European Court for Human Rights in the environment of Internet as well as to the freedom of expression in the context of the EU Charter of fundamental rights. In the conclusion of the monograph one of its authors describes his personal experience with “realisation” of freedom of expression in China. The significance of this monograph is obviously reflected by the fact that this book was listed among the most important releases in the annual report on the activity of SAS in the year 2015.

The civil law research was focused on business law, civil law, intellectual property law and competition law. In the research within the framework of the VEGA project the business law research was focused on the issues of the statute of limitation in connection with the recodification of civil law (principal investigator O. Ovečková). The research team dealt mainly with development and practical application of the institute of statute of limitation which was significant for recodification of civil law. For this purpose there were exploited the research outcomes published in a monograph called “Statute of limitation in business law” which were elaborated into more detailed form for formulation of development trends of the institute of statute of limitation. From this point of view there were assessed also the last legislative amendments which significantly (mainly in a negative way) affected the legal regulation of statute of limitation. This applies especially to: i) the problem of the (ex officio) duty of a court to take into account the application of statute of limitation in a particular case; ii) the change of the application of the Business Code on the relationships whose one subject is a consumer; iii) and the respective retroactivity of legal norms. Outcomes of this project were published in several scientific articles. At the same time the research team formulated other theoretical generalisations relating the competition of particular civil law principles.

The specialized research within the framework of VEGA projects was focused also on multidisciplinary relations connected with the economic competition and advertisement (principal investigator J. Vozár).

A particular VEGA project dealt with the issue of legal subjects (providers) of research, development and innovation in the context of transformation of organisations of the Slovak Academy of Sciences (principal investigator B. Králičková). The aim of the project is a detailed analysis of new legal regulation of work of legal subjects (providers) of research, development and innovation in the form of The Public Research Institutions Act and Slovak Academy of Science Act which are being prepared. The aim is also to compare changes which will flow after the enactment of this legal regulation. The project also includes comparative analysis of Czech and Slovak legal regulation of subject of research, development, and innovation. The final outcome of the project will take a form of a bilingual commentary on the Public Research Institutions Act and Slovak Academy of Science Act in Slovak and English languages.

At the end of this summary of the most significant research activities realised by the Institute in the evaluated period we state that except of successful development of the Institute's scientific activity mainly within the framework of the realised projects the Institute was in the years 2014 and 2015 involved in a preparation of transformation of SAS. During the years 2014 and 2015 the Institute's researchers worked on preparatory stages of legislative process related to the amendment of the Slovak Academy of Sciences Act as well as to new legal regulation of public research institutions. These activities had also their scientific dimension. The Institute's workers during this process regularly and actively took part in meetings of the Transformation commission of SAS (consultant body of the Chairman of SAS) as well as in meeting of self-administrative bodies of SAS, i.e. the Presidency of the Academy and the General Assembly of the Academy. Between these meetings the workers prepared documents such as a detailed proposal of the bill on public research institutions and the amending bill of the Slovak Academy of Science Act. They also elaborated a general and particular part of the explanatory report on the former document. These documents were proposed as incentives of SAS designed for the needs of the Ministry of education, science, research and sport SR.

2. Partial indicators of main activities:

2.1. Research output

2.1.1. Principal types of research output of the institute: basic research/applied research, international/regional (ratios in percentage)

The Institute realizes basic and applied research in the following proportions: basic research – 90 % and applied research – 10 %. The scientific outcomes of the Institute have international and regional impact approximately in the same extent (50/50 %).

Conferences 2012

International symposium Law – Business – Economy

It was an international scientific event focused on wide range of business law issues. A collective volume was released as an outcome of this conference.

Priorities of the social security system

This scientific conference continued the tradition of previous conferences from the field of social security system organized by Institute of state and law in regular 2-years intervals since the year 1997.

Autumn law school – Legal liability

PhD. students from Slovakia, Czech Republic and Poland acquired relatively complex picture of one of the fundamental categories of law which is particularly affected by postmodern fragmentation and convertibility. Thus it was useful to investigate and demonstrate changes of legal system on this category. Participants met lecturers, significant lawyers which they would otherwise know only from the scientific literature.

A norm is legal if it is posited by one of the formal sources of law (it has the external form of law) and as such it is not posited "only" in a human mind. A legal norm is not an outcome, but a subject of interpretation. If we accepted a thesis that legal norms are in human minds, we would need to rewrite a significant part of legal theory and it would also contradict the understanding of law by legal practice. Moreover, people are convinced about legality of many norms which they actually do not know. Legal norm is a thought and information. Therefore it can exist in many places at the same time, however for its legality it is crucial that it is posited in some of the formal sources of law among which only a legal custom enables us to think that legal norms are posited in human minds.

In memory of the 25th anniversary of the Velvet revolution and of restoration of the freedom of expression at our territory the Institute of State and Law of SAS organized an international conference called Freedom of expression in case law of courts.

The outcome of this conference is a collective monograph in which authors deal with philosophical, historical but mainly legal aspects of freedom of expression. In the form of analysis of the most relevant judicial decisions they focus on the development of judicial case law not only in post socialist countries such as Hungary, Slovakia, the Czech Republic, but also in well-established democracies such as USA, Germany and France. Particularly, they pay their attention to the case law of the European Court for Human Rights in the environment of Internet as well as to the freedom of expression in the context of the EU Charter of fundamental rights. In the conclusion of the monograph one of its authors describes his personal experience with “realisation” of freedom of expression in China.

Inštitút premlčania vo väzbe na rekodifikáciu súkromného práva (Institute of limitation in relation to recodification of private law)

Principal investigator: Oľga Ovečková
Grant scheme: VEGA
Project number: 2/0007/15
Duration of project: 1. 1. 2015 – 31. 12. 2016
Coordinator: Institute of State and Law of SAS

Achieved outcomes:

The scientific activity was focused on achievement of tasks within the framework of project VEGA 2/2007/15/13 (the project name: Institute of statute of limitation in connection with the recodification of civil law). The research team dealt mainly with development and practical application of the institute of statute of limitation which was significant for recodification of civil law. For this purpose there were exploited the research outcomes published in a monograph called "Statute of limitation in business law" which were elaborated into more detailed form for formulation of development trends of the institute of statute of limitation. From this point of view there were assessed also the last legislative amendments which significantly (mainly in a negative way) affected the legal regulation of statute of limitation. This applies especially to: i) the problem of the (ex officio) duty of a court to take into account the application of statute of limitation in a particular case; ii) the change of the application of the Business Code on the relationships whose one subject is a consumer; iii) and the respective retroactivity of legal norms. Outcomes of this project were published in several scientific articles. At the same time the research team formulated other theoretical generalisations relating the competition of particular civil law principles.

In this study there are processed the ideas of Slovak fascists to create a corporative state in Slovakia as well as particular attempts to formulate these ideas into a legal form. Despite the fact that corporatism was included in the Slovak constitution from the July 1939, the attempts to realise it ended up unsuccessful already in 1940-1941. The study is based on research of archives.

The journal is called Legal Viewpoint (Právny obzor) and in the Slovak legal environment it has a longstanding tradition. It is the oldest legal scientific journal which has been continuously released since 1917 in the Slovak language. Therefore the journal mirrors the development of law, jurisprudence, legal thought in Slovakia and during its almost century old history it has formed into the scientific journal with a significant position in the area of Central Europe. In the present time there are annually released 6 issues of the journal. It is a medium for publishing original articles from various legal and state disciplines. It is a forum for free communication of expertly grounded thoughts; for presentation of the outcomes of long-termed scientific investigations; for commemorating of persons who indisputably influenced legal thinking and for vivid reflections of state and law. The journal is peer reviewed. The release of every article is subjected to confirmation of the editorial board. Every article is reviewed by at least two reviewers who are specialists in the respective scientific domain. The editorial board consists of experts from various legal disciplines and they have international reputation. In the editorial board there are also foreign members from Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic and Legal Services of the European Commission with the seat in the Brussels.

The significant feature of the journal is that the articles published in it are from time to time quoted in the prestigious Index to Foreign Legal Periodicals, Berkeley: University of California Press. Abstracts of the scientific articles published in the Legal Viewpoint in English language as well as key words are published on the web page of the journal The Central European Journal of Social Sciences and Humanities (<http://cejsh.icm.edu.pl/>).

In the year 2013 the journal was awarded at the 21st annual set of international scientific event of German, Czech, Slovak and Austrian lawyers called "The Carlsbad Days of Law". The award was granted in the category best lawyer journal in the Slovak Republic in the year 2012.

The editorial board applied for registration in the Current Contents Index and the application is now processed.

- Supplementary information and/or comments on doctoral studies and educational activities

From the abovementioned outline it is apparent that the members of Institute of State and Law of SAS intensively participate in the educational process at several universities and in all three degrees of university studies. It should be emphasized that the main activity of the Institute focuses on the basic scientific research conducted on its own premises and in fulfilment of its own scientific program. With regard to the current material and personal limits of the Institute (not all employees work in the full time job) the scientific and pedagogical outcomes of the Institute's members in the evaluated period – in the context of the support of human resources of science in the Slovak Republic – can be rated as significant. In the evaluated period 2012 – 2015 the Institute did not operate as an external educational institution which would train its own Ph.D. students on the basis of contractual relationship with an accredited university provider of Ph.D. studies. However several its research workers collaborated as directors of studies (trainers, supervisors), opponents and members of commissions for defence of dissertation theses held at universities in the SR and CR. During the year 2015 Institute of State and Law of SAS filled an application requesting from the Ministry of education, science, research and sport in SR an accreditation of Ph.D. studies in the field no. 6831 Theory of state and law. The final decision of the Ministry will be granted in July 2016. After the eventual confirmation of the request and after acquiring the accreditation the Institute would operate as an external educational institution which would train its own Ph.D. students on the basis of contractual relationship with a university provider of Ph.D. studies – Law Faculty of the University of P. J. Šafárik in Košice. Scientific and specialized employees of the Institute regularly take part in scientific conferences of Ph.D. students organized by universities. The extent of participation of the Institute's members in the educational process at universities equals approximately to the extent of educational activity of a smaller university department. In the present days, two Ph.D. students work as full time job employees of the Institute. These students might strengthen the core scientific potential of the Institute in future. This form of cooperation of the Institute with universities seems to contribute to the further shaping of the Institute's personal basis. However the admission of other successful and prospective Ph.D. students into the scientific staff of the Institute is inhibited by undersized number of systematized vacancies at the Institute: Ph.D. students trained by qualified trainers from the Institute after the completion of their studies look for their jobs outside the Slovak Academy of Science. This long-lasting negative situation cannot be solved by the Institute itself. It would be helpful if the Presidency of the SAS realized the pressure of new challenges which the legal science has to face in the extremely dynamic social a legal development. In the field of pedagogical activity the Autumn School of Law has acquired a special popularity among Ph.D. students and post-doctoral researchers. This event is original scientific-educational activity even in the area of V4. In the year 2015 the Institute organized already the jubilee 20th annual set of this event. The Autumn School is regularly attended by participants from the Slovak Republic, Czech Republic, Poland and in some years also by participants from Hungary. The high quality of lecturers and developed personal network of the Institute give good reason to predict that this tradition will be carried on. Even when organizing the Autumn School of Law the Institute meets with understanding resulting into extra-budget support without which this successful tradition would perish.

2.6.5. List of most important social discourses under the leadership or with significant participation of the institute (max. 10 items)

2.6.6. Summary of relevant activities, max. 300 words

Institute of State and Law of SAS has its representative in the Legislative council of the Government of the SR – prof. JUDr. Oľga Ovečková, DrSc., who regularly attends the council's meetings (once per week) and comments all legislative bills proposed to the government. In her reasoned opinions presented on the particular aspects of law she employs not only her knowledge, but to a significant extent she also employs outcomes of the basic research conducted by other members of the Institute. It is fast, informal and permanent exploitation of the scientific outcomes and their transformation into social practice.

JUDr. Ľudmila Gajdošíková, CSc. works as a justice of the Constitutional Court of the Slovak Republic.

JUDr. Eduard Bárány, DrSc. works as a counsellor of the Prime minister of the SR for the area of justice and at the same time he is a chairman of the State commission for election and control of funding of political parties.

Doc. JUDr. Jozef Vozár, CSc. works as a member of the Court Council of the SR and in the 2012 he was a counsellor of the Prime minister of the SR for the area of fight against corruption and for development of democracy.

The Institute's researchers served as lecturers for series of lectures organised by the Justice Academy of the Slovak Republic and Supreme Court of the Slovak Republic for judges, judicial clerks and executors (see 2.6.3). Research outcomes of the Institutes could be directly communicated to practitioners and could directly influence legal practice by this way.

The Institute commemorated the significant anniversary of our history, namely the 25th anniversary of the Velvet revolution and the restoration of the freedom of expression on the territory of Slovakia, by organizing an international conference "Freedom of expression in decisions of courts" in 2014. The international conference was organized under auspices of the President of the Republic His Eminence Andrej Kiska. Freedom of expression is one of the basic pillar on which a democratic society stands. The 25th anniversary of fall of the totalitarian regime was a suitable opportunity for comparison of development of this right with neighbouring countries as well as with well-established democracies. Leading Slovak and foreign experts took part in this event. They analysed case law in this field and explored aspects of freedom of expression from several legal branches.

The outcome of this conference is a collective monograph "Freedom of expression in decisions of courts" in which authors deal with philosophical, historical but mainly legal aspects of freedom of expression. In the form of analysis of the most relevant judicial decisions they focus on the development of judicial case law not only in post socialist countries such as Hungary, Slovakia, the Czech Republic, but also in well-established democracies such as USA, Germany and France. Particularly, they pay their attention to the case law of the European Court for Human Rights in the environment of Internet as well as to the freedom of expression in the context of the EU Charter of fundamental rights. In the conclusion of the monograph one of its authors describes his personal experience with "realisation" of freedom of expression in China. The significance of this monograph is obviously reflected by the fact that this book was listed among the most important releases in the annual report on the activity of SAS in the year 2015.

2.7.2. Table of outreach activities according to institute annual reports

Outreach activities	2012	2013	2014	2015	total
Articles in press media/internet popularising results of science, in particular those achieved by the Institute	45	76	59	20	200

From the abovementioned data and chart it flows that scientific workers of the Institute to a significant extent present outcomes of their research, or expert reasoned opinions on important social problems, in their popularisation activities. The strong aspect of the Institute's activities with this respect rests in the fact that the Institute provides expert reasoned opinions on various legal issues which are solved within the framework of the activity of the Institute at the request of telecommunication media (see chart 2.7.2).

2.8.3. Important research infrastructure (max. 2 pages)

a. The state and development of the research infrastructure including experimental, computer and technical equipment During the evaluated period the Institute seats in the building for social sciences at the Klemens street no 19, Bratislava. The work conditions of the Institute are not optimal in the long run of time. The worst is the state of facilities for the Institute's library. The enormous increase of library's catalogue, as for example Collections of laws since the year 1989, resulted into fact that the library is short of space for maintenance of the catalogue. During the evaluated period the Institute managed to secure other material equipment, mainly the computer equipment, however in the near future it will be necessary to keep renovating it. At the same time it will be necessary to realize general reconstruction of the working facilities of the Institute's researchers which are in emergency condition. However this is caused by the general condition of the building at Klemens street no 19. In the present the Institute is not able to solve this situation at its own expenses.

b. State and development of bibliographical sources and activity of library

Institute of State and Law of SAS has in its organisational structure the Department of scientific information which includes the library and documentation. In the evaluated period 2012 – 2015 this department provided absent and present borrowings services, retrievals and outlines not only for the Institute's members but also for other employees of the SAS, mainly from the social science institutes. With regard to valid contracts on cooperation between the Institute and universities the library was visited to a large extent also by university students and Ph.D. students. The library catalogue includes voluminous lawyer and partially interdisciplinary literature, wide range of dictionaries, encyclopaedias, complete hard covered yearbooks of Collection of laws of SR and CR, Official journal of the EU – series L and C on DVDs, and scientific journals from domestic as well as foreign origin.

In the period of 2012 – 2015 the catalogue expanded by 525 titles, from which 381 were purchased and 144 were endowed. The irregularity of purchase of scientific literature is caused by insufficiency of financial resources. It is needed to say that during the evaluated period the prices of scientific literature, mainly from abroad, significantly raised.

In the period of 2012 – 2015 the Institute's library worked with the electronic Collection of laws ASPI (automatized system of lawyers' information), which regularly updates and contains also the Czech collection of laws, case law, lawyers' and economic literature and various indexes. The department of scientific information has its own material and personal indexes of its own catalogue on a CD. It processes systematic outlines of publication activities of the Institute's researchers; it exchanges information on publication activities with other libraries in the respective domain. In the evaluated period 45 retrievals were elaborated for the workers of the Institute.

During the period between 2012 and 2014 there was in the Institute's library (after a longer time) a revision of the library's catalogue which resulted into the revision final report in the first half of the year 2015 and where are stated exact conclusions a results. On the basis of this report we may conclude that the library's catalogue (books and hard-covered journals) consists of 16 045 library's units (data relevant to 31st December 2015).

Currently there is in the library one full-time employed librarian with the degree from library science and scientific-technical information. The librarian realizes not only ordinary librarian activities such as acquisition, processing, evidence and publication of the library's catalogue, managing the borrowing system (either in a present or absent form), retrievals and borrowings of books between different libraries, indexing of the library's catalogue including new units in the electronic system KIS MASK (library-information system for small and medium libraries), searching in the system ASPI and other accessible databases, but she at the same time makes excerpts from incoming journals and non-periodical literature and make evidence of the publication activities of the Institute's researchers in the electronic integrated information system designed for this purpose (ARL – EPC), which is directly connected to all other Institutes of SAS, including the Central library of SAS. In the abovementioned electronic system KIS MASK there are processed 3345 library units and from these 843 are re-signed with completed data (including authors and respective key words). The Institute's library closely collaborates with the methodological department of the Central library of SAS as well as with libraries of other institutes.

Currently, the Institute's library receives 24 journals, from these 4 journals as a donation from other institutions. With respect to reduction of financial resources, the library receives 11 journals as a part of exchange for the journal Legal Viewpoint which is released by the Institute. In the evaluated period the Institute made the Legal Viewpoint journal accessible in a digitalised form (volumes from years 1917 – 2015) and Lawyers' Studies journal (volumes 1950 – 1989). In this period the Institute's library provided 2494 borrowings either in a present or absent form, mainly for the workers of the Institute but also for workers of other social-science institutes of SAS and from students of law faculties in Slovakia.

2.8.4. Description of how the results and suggestions of the previous assessment were taken into account

The team of the Institute's employees in its scientific activity tried to respond to conclusions formulated in the reports of evaluators who assessed the period of 2007 – 2011 irrespective of the fact whether these reports emphasized the strong aspects or pointed to the weak aspects of the Institute's activity. Special attention was paid to concluding recommendations of evaluators.

From the previous evaluated period the evaluators picked up as strong aspects of the Institute mainly the timeliness, scope and quality of the outcomes of the research projects and their substantial impact; focus on crucial issues of problems of state and law, mainly with respect to the Slovak Republic's entrance into the EU; immediate fructification of several partial scientific outcomes of the Institute especially in the constitutional and wider social practice; strengthening of the scientific position of the organisation in the international context and its stable scientific reputation together with integrative functioning in national context; regular scientific communication through scientific conferences in the Central Europe and through annually organized Autumn School of Law for Ph.D. students and post-doctoral researchers where lectures on new social topics are offered not only to law students but also to students from other scientific and pedagogical institutions from SR as well as from abroad.

The quantitative increase of scientific outcomes as well as the fact that the Institute achieved positive results in all key partial indicators despite the restricted financial support and small number of researchers was described by the evaluators as remarkable. They also concluded that direct outcomes into the practice in the form of expert and popularisation activities are in adequate proportion to the number of researchers who respond to the actual requirements of practice. The evaluators stressed out the fact that the Legal Viewpoint journal is in the long time the most popular theoretical journal in the field of law not only in SR, but it was positively assessed also on the Carlsbad Days of Law and is indexed in prestigious Index to Foreign Legal Periodicals. They also appreciated the Institute's effort to register Legal Viewpoint within the Current Contents Index and significant change in generational structure of the Institute's researchers in favour of younger scientists.

The abovementioned summary of the Institute's research activities (point 2 – Partial indicators of main activities) indicates that the aspects which the previous evaluators described as strong were not only maintained by the Institute's employees but they were also strengthened and developed. The Institute carried on with its scientific activity in accordance with the Institute's statute as well as with its expert activities oriented to decisional and public sphere.

Among the weaker aspects of the Institute the evaluators stressed out the need to provide Ph.D. studies and to create environment to admit post-doctoral researchers on the Institute's premises. The Institute should also release a journal indexed in the Current Contents database. These recommendations were taken into account and the Institute in the evaluated period 2012 – 2015 paid maximal effort to match them. In this period the Institute did not operate as an external educational institution which would train its own Ph.D. students on the basis of contracts with some of the accredited university, however several of its researchers cooperate as directors of studies (trainers), opponents and members of commissions for defence of doctoral theses at various universities across SR and CR. In the course of the year 2015 the Institute prepared and submitted an application to the Ministry of education, science, research and sport SR and requested it to confirm accreditation of the Ph.D. studies in the study field 6831 Theory and history of state and law. The final decision of the Ministry should be issued in July 2016. After the eventual confirmation of the application the Institute would be able to operate as an external educational institution which would train its own Ph.D. students on the basis of contractual relationship with an accredited university – Law Faculty of P. J. Šafárik University in Košice. The delayed application of the request (at the end of the evaluated period) was caused by the fact that the Institute was preparing application for accreditation of other Ph.D. study program in the field of civil law. However due to a sudden death of one of the expert warrantors of the program prof. JUDr. Ján Švidroň, CSc. this ambition could not be fulfilled and it was necessary to prepare a new application for the accreditation in the field of theory and history of state and law.

As to the recommendation to realize issuing of a journal registered with the Current Contents Index, the Institute issues a theoretical journal for topics of state and law called Legal Viewpoint (Právny obzor), which has longstanding tradition in Slovakia. It is the oldest lawyers' scientific journal which has been issued since 1917 in the Slovak language. During its almost century long history the journal acquired a serious reputation and it is a scientific journal with significant position in the Central European environment. The significant feature of the journal is that the articles published in it are from time to time quoted in the prestigious Index to Foreign Legal Periodicals, Berkeley: University of California Press. Abstracts of the scientific articles published in the Legal Viewpoint in English language as well as key words are published on the web page of the journal The Central European Journal of Social Sciences and Humanities (<http://cejsh.icm.edu.pl/>). The Institute as the issuer of the journal is permanently interested in registering it within the Current Contents Index and therefore it pays maximal effort to achieve success in this respect. The editorial board applied for registration in the Current Contents Index and the application is now processed. It is necessary to add, that the process of indexing is long-lasting and demanding. Now the Legal Viewpoint is carefully observed and evaluated.

With respect to the quality of the scientific activity and innovative topics which the Institute's researchers bring into the field of legal science, it is necessary to emphasize that the Institute has been oriented towards bringing new issues into the area of science since the eighties of the previous century. As first ones we started to elaborate concepts such as law-governed state, legal pluralism or postmodernism in law. The outputs of the Institute's researchers have been followed by other authors. Despite the low number of researchers the Institute achieves stable results and it is evident that the Institute enters into the multidisciplinary cooperation with other social-science disciplines, predominantly with the philosophy and sociology. Several scientific outputs are offered to direct practical utilisation. The quality of the Institute's scientific outputs is indicated also by high average number of quotations per one researcher – this was another successfully matched recommendation from the previous evaluation of the Institute (see point 2.2 and chart 2.2.1). In the evaluated period the Institute's workers were intensively engaged as evaluators of the national projects APVV and VEGA. High scientific expediency of the Institute's workers manifests itself also in the fact that the scientific environments as well as people from private and state environment are steadily interested in the workers' opinions and experience. Since the year 1990 the Institute was tank for private sphere and the Institute's workers worked as justices of the Constitutional Court of the Slovak Republic; they worked in the Secretary of the National Council of SR, in Office of the Government SR, in bank sector, in prestigious lawyer's offices or in Legal Services of the European Commission.

The evaluators recommended emphasizing in the next activity of the Institute the communication in the wider European context; however they added that it was connected with strengthening of material resources of the institution. We respond to the constructive impulses of the evaluators who assessed the scientific activity of the Institute in the period of 1st January 2007 – 31st December 2011 and which the Institute did not manage to match in the period of 1st January 2012 – 31st December 2015 in the point 3 of this accreditation survey - Research strategy and future development of the institute for the next five years (2016-2020).

- Supplementary information and/or comments on management, research infrastructure, and trends in personnel development

Institute of State and Law of SAS in the evaluated period submitted to the Presidency of SAS several reasoned opinions in which the Institute emphasizes the significance of science about state and law within the framework of science of history, human, society, culture and arts. It also stressed out the urgent social need for strengthening interdisciplinary collaboration of institutes of the third department of SAS. Scientific work in these disciplines has its own remarkable features as opposed to natural and technical sciences and it needs for its own scientific development appropriate conditions. These questions are especially cast in the context of transformation of SAS organisations into public research institution which is being prepared. These peculiarities will have to be taken into account with respect to personal and expert growth of the Institute in future.

3. Research strategy and future development of the institute for the next five years (2016-2020) (Recommended 3 pages, max. 5 pages)

3.1. Present state of the art in both the national and the international contexts

i. Present state of knowledge and research

The summary of the Institute's research activities in the evaluated period shows that the Institute's researchers reflected adequately the present state of art from the national, European and global point of view in every area of research in accordance with the mission of the Institute and according to its establishing documents. This was visible also in preparing grant projects which were realized in the period of 1st January 2012 – 31st December 2015. In connection with the research realized in previous periods the researchers gradually formulated and fulfilled other research objectives according to the capacities of the institute, which are however in context of the mission of the Institute significantly undersized by the number of systematized vacancies within the framework of SAS, (undersized by the given organisational structure). This structure does not reflect new tasks and challenges which the basic research in the area of legal science has to face within the context of national, European and global development and within the context of interdisciplinarity of issues which the third department of SAS solves (science of human, society and culture). It is appropriate to remind that after the year 1989 there was a wide decrease in the number of employees in SAS (50 %), and for the area of science of state and law this period started to be extremely dynamic and therefore demanding for complex processing. At the beginning of this long-lasting and wide-spectral process there were included in the research program issues of europeisation and European security; significant strengthening of protection of human rights through the European institutions (the Council of Europe, the EU Commission); issues of implementation and perfection of law-governed state and constitutional law, especially through the activity of the Constitutional Court of the Slovak Republic; formation of the new business law in accordance with the transformation of the whole economic area associated with preparation of recodifications in the field of private law; legally regulated support of creation of free competitive environment through the competition law; media law and issues in the field of social security systems. The Institute devoted to these main topics concentrated attention for two decades in its research whose outcomes were applied both in theory and practice.

The Institute focused its research within the assessed period also to deep examination within the area of legal theory and philosophy. The state of knowledge in legal theory and philosophy in the spirit of postmodernism cannot be delimited by one all-encompassing grand thesis. The movement of legal pluralism associated with the significant changes in understanding of law is being developed. The systematic approach understands the law as an autopoietic system. It is evident that legal thinking keeps tight relations with some other scientific disciplines where to the classical exploitation of knowledge of philosophy, sociology and political sciences the knowledge of anthropology, informatics, economics and science of literature is added.

Thus the pressure for practical fructification of legal theory is raising and this leads to higher relevance of research focused on methodology of interpretation of law and legal argumentation. The same pressure, prima facie paradoxically, leads to support of study of justice in law, sources of law and legal informatics.

Public law is composed of a set of various legal branches (constitutional law, administrative law, criminal law, procedural law – both criminal and civil, financial law, etc.)

which cannot be delimited by the only one definition. At least in the Central Europe there are being developed power tensions between the EU and its member states.

The Institute in the evaluated period focused here on the parts of classical constitutional law, criminal law as well as law of human rights with emphasize on equality of rights.

The expertise of the Institute's researchers in all main fields of research was widened and deepened also on the basis of acquiring new European and international academic experience and contacts with developed scientific institutions abroad (for more details see published reports on the Institute's activities in previous years and concisely in other paragraphs of this accreditation survey), but also with specialized international organisations into which the Slovak Republic entered, either as a new member or as a successor of the CSFR (WIPO, UNIDROIT, UNESCO and others). It should be reminded that in the same period in which there were emphasized the issues of europeisation of legal order, new demanding tasks were cast by the completed process of transformation of the General agreement on customs and trade (GATT) which gave birth to the World trade organisation (WTO) in 1994 with a robust global impact on the area of world trade. New international instruments were adopted within the framework of the World organisation of intellectual property (WIPO) and WTO also for enhancing the protection of results of creative scientific, technological and artistic activity (the protection of intellectual property). The issues of legal status and anchoring of SR within the EU and oncoming presidency of SR in the European Council as well as new tasks coming from changes of digital technologies; issues of gender equality; migration; environmental law; new modern trends in viewing at legal systems, legal environment and legal thought are and perhaps will be in the centre of the Institute's research focus in future. These issues are also reflected in the Institute's basic research. In all abovementioned areas the Institute's core research team has sufficient base of knowledge which is developed, widened and which is gradually systematized in monographs and offered for exploitation in legislative and application legal sphere in the field of public administration and territorial self-government, economy, social system and culture.

ii. Task and significance of organisation within the framework of research in the respective field

Since the establishment of SAS, state and law underwent difficult transformations. These changes were reflected also by legal science institutionalized within Institute of State and Law of SAS. It was established in 1953 and its history je partially elaborated in a monograph Slovak Academy of Sciences: Institute of State and Law of SAS 1953 – 2013 (Bratislava: VEDA, 2013, ISBN 978-80-224-1318-3), which was prepared for the participants of the scientific conference "Self-realisation of legal science" organised to commemorate the 60th anniversary of the Institute's establishment. The publication served also to inform wider public. Since the Institute's beginning there worked many significant personalities. Since 1989 the Institute is a source of qualified experts for relevant positions in the public life (the Constitutional Court of SR, Legal Services of the EU Commission, the Secretary of the NC SR, the Legislative council of the Government of SR).

The scientific activity of the Institute's employees resulted into several significant scientific outputs which influenced further development of legal thought in the affected branches of legal order. The 60th anniversary of the Institute's establishment which was commemorated in 2013 was an opportunity for retrospective assessment of its activity and for reconsidering its new task in according with its irreplaceable position in the Slovak legal science. The scientific outputs which resulted from the Institute's activity are (beside many monographs) documented mainly on the pages of the journal Legal Viewpoint. In the year 2017 we will commemorate the 100th anniversary of its establishment and constant issuing (in 1917 the journal started to be issued in Budapest by Slovak lawyer JUDr. Emil Stodola). Another significant scientific journal which was released during the past decades and which significantly reflected the history of the Institute was called The Lawyers' Studies. These journals represent an archive of legal thinking in Slovakia and they are a rich source of legal knowledge. We can draw an inspiration from them in many ways also in solving the latest tasks which the legal science has to face these days.

As the only centre of basic legal research outside the university in the Slovak Republic the Institute fulfils a certain integrative function in the respective domain of science. Its collaboration with universities and other institutes of the third department of SAS is noteworthy. However the poor material equipment and the abovementioned undersized number of employees restrict the Institute's scientific ambition in the long run of time, especially with relation to the foreign research centres of similar interest. Despite this fact we can conclude that Institute of State and Law of SAS has built during its existence a solid position in areas of its scientific activity and its results are widely exploited by legal practice as well as by other research centres not only in the Slovak Republic but also abroad.

iii. Main aims of the conception

In the previous evaluated periods there were created solid grounds upon which the further development of the Institute's scientific activity can be established in all main directions of basic research. The main scientific aims of the Institute are put in more detail in four research grant projects VEGA with the period of investigation to the 31st December 2016 or the 31st December 2017. From the perspective of longer period of time the aims of the Institute were realised in the grant project APVV-0340-10 "Law in the dynamics of social development and its theoretical reflections" with the period of investigation until the 31st October 2014. This project followed the previously solved grant projects APVV-51-000805 "Constitutionalisation and legislation in the conditions of SR as a member state of the EU with particular respect to the functioning of law-governed state and legal practice" – the final assessment of the APVV was "outstanding level"; and before that the project ŠPVV n. 2003 SR 51/028063 "Legal sciences and their contribution to the analysis of the transition process in the condition of the integration into the EU".

During the evaluated period 2012 – 2015 there was successfully realised and finished the grant project APVV-0340-10 "Law in the dynamics of social development and its theoretical reflections" with the period of investigation until the 31st October 2014 and three other research grant projects VEGA with the period of investigation until the 31st of December 2012. In this context it is necessary to mention that all research projects which the Instituted has hitherto solved were successfully finished with the final assessment "outstanding level" or "fulfilled".

The research topic of the abovementioned project APVV included multidisciplinary legal relations. It was divided into two parts from which the first was focused on the questions of positive law (public and private law, European and international law) and the second was focused on questions of legal theory (including research in the field of legal philosophy and legal history). The research in the first took a form of reflection of the latest European and international harmonisation projects in the field of civil and business law in the Slovak legal order with the emphasize on the selected issues of contractual law, economic competition, intellectual property law, protection of personality, social security and perfection of state administration as well as international aspects of globalisation. The starting research orientation in this scope of topics were provided by various significant international and European harmonisation projects (mainly Principles UNIDROIT, PECL, CFR and the accompanying results of the latest European and globally-focused international research). In this part of the research the Institute explored primarily new trends in development of obligation law, protection of competition by antitrust law (mainly civil law aspects of the competition law which were not subject of systematic scientific attention), selected interdisciplinary aspects of protection against unfair competition (deceptive advertisement, comparative advertisement, advertisement of tobacco and medicines). Particular area of research consisted of protection of personal rights (right to privacy, protection of reputation and dignity). In relation to the protection of persons the issue of equality and discrimination was also investigated. Interdisciplinary orientation of the first section of the project included also constitutional aspects of public administration as a starting point of investigation of own issues of public administration, especially forms of its execution. In the wide expert community there had been proposal to adopt a criminal liability of corporations and since the Institute had research capacity to deal with this problem, it was included into the project (the coverage of these topics were realised by O. Ovečková, J. Švidroň, J. Vozár, J. Azud, L. Gajdošíková, D. Nikodým, P. Kukliš, L. Kurilovská, Z. Magurová, L. Lapšanský, V. Janáč, B. Králíčková, J. Ďurechová, M. Kropaj). The central orientation of the research in its second part was the change and fragmentation of law and their theoretical reflections. These are key words of current and especially postmodern legal thinking. At least implicitly some trends are based on them, notably postmodern legal thinking and conception of law as autopoietic system. In the international context these issues can be situated into the historical social and systematic level with theoretical connection to the Hart's rule of change as perhaps the most adequate attempt to grasp the change of law. The change of law is usually related with the development of interests and values which are predominant in a given society. External factors are relevant for the change of law valid at a certain state territory. In the case of the Slovak Republic as a new member state of the EU it was about determination of the content of valid law which was not always visible from the first sight. Moreover, the EU law itself permanently develops. For understanding of the phenomenon of the change of law the historical analysis of legal changes is crucial. In this respect the breaking political moments of the legal history of Czechoslovakia and Slovakia in the 20th century are particularly illustrative. The special type of change of law is represented by the development in the Central European and Eastern European states during last decades (research in this section was conducted by E. Bárány, P. Colotka, A. Tokár, K. Zavacká, L. Berdisová).

With respect to future scientific tendency of the Institute and with respect to vision of its scientific capacity, the key role will be played by two new significant grant projects APVV, which the Institute successfully acquired within the general call for applications in 2015. These projects represent vision of further scientific orientation of the Institute until the year 2020 and the Institute will start to solve them since July 2016. They are focused on topics "Legal pluralism: changes in understanding of law" and "Long-lasting and recent tendencies of development of positive law in selected branches of legal order".

3.2. Research strategy of the institute in the national and the international contexts, objectives and methods

With respect to future scientific tendency of the Institute and with respect to vision of its scientific capacity, the key role will be played by two new significant grant projects APVV, which the Institute successfully acquired within the general call for applications in 2015, as mentioned above. These projects represent vision of further scientific orientation of the Institute until the year 2020 and the Institute will start to solve them since July 2016. They are focused on topics “Legal pluralism: changes in understanding of law” and “Long-lasting and recent tendencies of development of positive law in selected branches of legal order”. The Institute aims to focus in the future period to research of multiple general questions, such as trying to find a balance between contractual freedom and public regulation within corporate and contractual relationships or questions related to consistent promotion of protection of competition and new types of intervention into competition.

The current scientific capacity of the Institute in its multigenerational qualified basis ranges from creative scientific personalities with long-standing influence in the scientific area to the young scientific workers who are shortly after their successful finish of Ph.D. studies.

The basic strategic objective of the Institute’s conception in the medium-term perspective rests in significant strengthening of establishment of young scientific workers in its organisational structure and to secure the continuity of the Institute’s scientific activity in all areas of research in the long perspective of time. It should be taken into account that the outcomes achieved in this scientific activity in the previous periods were produced by relatively small number of own scientific employees and it should be added that from the objective as well as subjective causes the scientific personal succession is not fully secured in all areas which the Institute would like to cover in future, especially with particular reference to the need to strengthen the Institute’s involvement in the European and broader international research environment. The transformation of SAS should create better conditions for solving these problems in comparison with the past. There is no lack of opportunities to collaborate with foreign research institutions; however the current state of effective research staff and its material situation does not enable the Institute to exploit these opportunities in a full range.

4. Other information relevant for the assessment

In contrast with the previously evaluated period it should be pointed out that in the case of adoption of a new legal regulation which would enable the change of legal form of the SAS organisations into the public research institutions, the Institute of state and law SAs is ready to use all opportunities resulting from this transformation for the benefits of the scientific work of its own employees and for its further institutional growth. The new legal regulation is now being prepared under the control of Ministry of education in close cooperation with the SAS. Although the Institute prepared for this transformation during all year 2015 in these days it is not clear when the legal regulation will be enacted. The Institute aims to put all its efforts so that it could maintain its role as an institution of basic research in the area of legal science in current extend even after possible transformation of the SAS.

Legal research which the Institute has conducted since the year 1989 offers solid grounds enabling to formulate new research aims. Detailed information on the Institute's research outcomes are available at www.usap.sav.sk. They might serve as an inspiration for considering interdisciplinary overlaps from the side of all organisations of SAS which all have to face in their activities also legal problems. So these organisations, while realising their specialised scientific priorities, may be inspired also by published research outcomes of the Institute: either they are about legislative framework of specialized scientific activities, legal protection of research outcomes or legal forms of transformation of these outputs into the application, etc. For the Institute these questions have always been essential and the Institute's research have always been conducted with the perspective of future application of its outcomes. Therefore these outcomes are naturally offered at the first place within the framework of SAS.
